

Question: Would you consider admitting a student who had been expelled for disciplinary reasons from

Question asked and results compiled by Lea Pennock, University of Saskatchewan

| Institution | No | Possibly | Notes |
|---------------------------|-----------|-----------------|--|
| Bishops | x | | not eligible for admission until they would be re-admissible to their home institution |
| Briercrest | | x | case by case basis; process includes letter and interview |
| UBC | | x | normally must be in good standing at their previous institution; can appeal in writing to Senate Admissions Committee if extenuating circumstances |
| Brock | | x | must be in good standing at home institution |
| Concordia | | | normally must be in good standing at home institution; appeals treated on a case by case basis |
| King's University College | | x | normally must be in good standing at home institution; appeals treated on a case by case basis |
| Lethbridge | | x | generally not admitted; exceptions only on the written approval of the VP (Academic) |
| McGill | | x | Would normally ask for an account of their expulsion and would usually ask them to clear their record at the sending institution before being considered. |
| Mount Saint Vincent | | x | Would proceed very cautiously; normally not eligible but on a case by case basis might pursue full knowledge of the case from both the student's and the previous institution's perspective |
| McMaster | x | | Must be eligible to return to their home institution Used to require that an applicant prove that his/her original u. would permit a re-admission before admitting an expelled student but found that many u's do not indicate on the transcript that a student has been expelled, so have now decided to treat them on the merit of their application. |
| Ottawa SAIT | x | | |
| Royal Military College | | x | Would handle on a case by case basis and request details fo the expulsion Don't generally ask for postsecondary documentation to support program admisions so by default would not know they had been expelled. |
| SIAST | | x | expelled. Generally will not admit a student under suspension or expulsion from another u. but as with most other decisions, this is appealable by the applicant |
| Simon Fraser | | x | |

|----------|---|---|
| Trent | ? | Wording of calendar invokes right of university to deny admission but there's no firm policy about denying expelled students |
| Waterloo | x | No formal policy but would likely handle on a case by case basis, considering nature of expulsion, applicant's account of the expulsion and length of time since standing was assigned |
| Windsor | x | U. Windsor is in process of implementing a 'sanctions on transcripts' policy which ensures other u's are informed of all students' sexpulsion status here; they hope other u's are also transparent in this regard. |
